LONE BANDIT ROBS HOMES IN FRANKFORT

Apparently operating alone, a nocturnal and youthful burglar raided three different homes in Frankfort last Thursday night, was surprised while robbing two of the places, and eventually escaped with $62 in cash and varied loot.

At midnight he made his first visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Krusemark, parents of Attorney Albert Krusemark. Mrs. Krusemark heard a door slam as he forced an entrance into the kitchen thru a window. He disappeared without obtaining anything after the Krusemarks had been aroused.

At three o'clock Friday morning, Mrs. Chas. Pfaff was awakened and looked up to see the same man standing at the foot of her bed, going thru her husband's trousers. She screamed and the man tossed the trousers over his head and fled towards the kitchen.

Mrs. Pfaff followed, leaving her husband, ill with pneumonia, in the bedroom. The lone burglar was cornered in the kitchen and was unable to force an exit. He fled back to the bathroom where he had forced an entrance thru the window and succeeded in escaping, but not before the family bulldog had taken two healthy nips at his posterior that produced a manized scream from the youthful robber. He dropped the trousers on the floor when the animal got in its bites.

Investigation disclosed that the burglar had obtained $12 from a pocketbook before Mrs. Pfaff was awakened. Deputies Leahm J. Kelly and Thomas Kokas who investigated, likewise discovered that the robber had attempted to steal a new automobile in the Pfaff garage, leaving behind a hunting knife. The deputies obtained a good description of the man from Mrs. Pfaff.

The third burglary was discovered at 5 o'clock Friday morning when Frank Folkers, father of Attorney Herbert Folkers, awakened to find his trousers and $50 missing. The trousers were found by the Folkers' garage but the $50 was missing from the pockets. The burglar also ransacked the lower part of the home taking a valuable imported cameo necklace and a Swiss watch.

Still another resident of Frankfort reported hearing a burglar, but apparently no other places were entered by the lone raider.

Frankfort Play Big Success

The play "Welcome to the Old Town" which was presented by the Frankfort Men's Endeavor Club at Frankfort Wednesday night went over big in every way and the acting showed that the Endeavor Club possesses real talent. The play was presented to a capacity house.

State to Observe Conservation Week

The State Departments of Conservation and Public Works and Buildings are collaborating on the work for Conservation Week and are glad to suggest the following general topics for consideration during the period from May 10 to 16:

Soil Erosion. Preservation and restoration of soil properties. Prevention of destructive eroding. Effect of erosion on stream conditions. Erosion or soil loss by wind.

Water and stream conditions. Industrial and municipal pollution control and abatement. Effect of erosion.

Reforestation, including all vegetation plantings and many other vital subjects.

Order Closed Road Opened

A committee consisting of Chas. Schumhl, John Cappel and Charles Smith who are interested in the Bonness property on the south side of Mokena as note holders, appeared before the village board Tuesday evening and entered a complaint that a road along this property which is recorded as a public street, had been closed and is being used as private property. After hearing the evidence the village board ordered that the road in question be opened to the use of the public even tho it has been used as a garden.

First Will County Centennial Program At Joliet High School

In the vivid Centennial pageant which will be given in the Joliet Township high school Gymnasium tonight, Friday the story of Will county's history, with all its richness of struggle and sacrifice, heroism and humor, will come to life and pass before the eyes of 6,000 people.

The pageant will be given on a stage 80 feet wide, accommodating as many as 150 actors at a single scene, in the double gymnasium of the high school. It will be the most mammoth production ever staged in this part of Illinois, a fitting lead for the series of events on the program of the Centennial.

Tickets are being sold by all high school students. The great auditorium will seat 6,000 but it may be necessary to hold over the performance for a second night, tickets are selling so fast. If purchased before Wednesday, the tickets will cost 25 and 35 cents; after Wednesday the price advanced five cents.

Requiring a cast of 1,500, the pageant will be produced in five chief episodes, with 50 scenes. The scenario was written by Miss Miriam Manchester, of the high school English department, authentically founded upon Will county history. Miss Elizabeth Barnes, of the history department, assisted in the research work, which was conducted for several weeks prior to the actual preparation of the manuscript.

Episodes of the pageant are in chronological sequence, the first picturing scenes from the period of 1600 to 1835, showing the coming of Marquette and Juliet, and the final departure of the Indians before the white settlers.

Episode two carries the history thru the pioneer years up to 1848, and the third episode runs on to 1856; the fourth episode portrays the period from 1856 to 1871, with emphasis on the Civil War, and the final fifth episode brings the pageant to a modern conclusion.

Men and events of great historical importance will be characterized and re-enacted in the pageant; Abraham Lincoln will move across the stage, and crowds will turn out to hail the coming of the first steam locomotive and the first canal boat.

Joliet Township High School band will take part in costumed groups, choral groups will appear, and colorful folk dancers will enliven the scenes. All action will be pantomime; none of the actors will speak, but the action will be followed by an out-of-state narrator.

Appoint Centennial Group to Prepare Frankfort Float

The Frankfort Township Will County Centennial committee met at the Mokena village hall last Friday night to decide what kind of a float Frankfort township will enter in the big parade at Joliet on June 4th. It was finally decided that the social side of the life of the pioneers of this township should be depicted and a very interesting and pleasing float is being prepared. Sup. Wm. Kampe of Frankfort township was the chairman of the evening. Mayor Edward Marti of Mokena and Mayor George Sangmeister of Frankfort have also been asked to serve on the township centennial committee.

MOTHER'S DAY

HEAVY RAIN FLOODS HIGHWAYS AND RAILROAD

One of the heaviest rain falls experienced in this section for a long time, fell here last Friday afternoon. The heavy rain came so fast that the water could not run off fast enough with the result that Lincoln Highway west of New Lenox was flooded to a depth of 2 feet and all traffic was tied up for some time. The Rock Island tracks west of New Lenox were under water and trains had to be flagged down until the water receded. At Marley the outwash Highway was 2 feet under water. At the Chas. Liess filling station at the Junction of Wolf Road and the Southwest Highway the highways were inundated for some distance and a number of cars became stalled when they attempted to run thru the flood waters. The water quickly receded after the storm was over.

Delinquents Will Be Given Ticket

The Mokena village board has exhausted all means of collecting delinquent vehicle licenses in a co-operative way and has now turned over the delinquent list to George Bennett for collection. Mr. Bennett, who has been vested with police powers will issue tickets to all offenders caught on the streets of Mokena and they will have to pay their delinquent licenses before Judge John F. Schultz with an additional cost.

Preparing For Poppy Day

The fifteenth annual sale of Buddy Poppies will be conducted here on May 23 for the benefit of disabled veterans and various phases of the relief and welfare work sponsored by the VFW.

The VFW Buddy Poppy is copyrighted with the United States patent office. It is the recognized flower representing the veterans devotion to the cause of veteran welfare.

Every cent from the sale of Poppies will be devoted to the welfare work of the more than 3,400 local units of the VFW throughout the country.

A portion of the proceeds is devoted to the maintenance funds of the VFW National Home for war orphans at Eaton Rapids, Michigan. Our organization founded this Home in 1925. Our members have been entirely responsible for its expansion during these years. Today this venture is a rapidly growing community of individual cottages in which family-size groups of children live under the watchful guardianship of qualified house mothers.

Other purposes to which the proceeds of the Buddy Poppy sale are devoted, include service work among veterans with respect to their government insurance and compensation claims and many other types of assistance of legal and technical character. Employment problems, are also among the phases of activities made possible by the Buddy Poppy distribution. Wear a Buddy Poppy Memorial Day!

THOUSAND VISIT MODERN HOME IN TINLEY PARK

About one thousand people inspected the new type steel home at the south Elmore subdivision in Tinley Park Sunday.

The small modern house, which, it is believed, is of the type which will usher in a new era in the low-cost housing field was opened to the public between the hours of 11 a. m. and 7 p. m.

The house, completely furnished was designed and fabricated by General Houses, Inc., and furnished and decorated by Sears, Roebuck & Co.

The prices of these prefabricated homes range from $3,748 for one of four rooms and standard equipment to $7,000 for the six room deluxe residence. The Tinley house has four rooms, bath, utility room in which is housed the oil boiler heating plant, stationary wash tubs, electric wash machine. There is also a roomy garage connected with the building.

It is pointed out that with seventy per cent FHA loan on an unencumbered $1,000 lot, a completely equipped home may be had with a cash payment as low as $375, with monthly payments of $27.50, plus fire insurance and taxes over a 15 year period.

All structural framing members of the house are of steel. Exterior walls are of asbestos cement with special insulation; interior walls and ceilings are of fir plywood.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., together with General Houses, Inc., believe that through this plan homes can be made available to a great number of people and will stimulate building construction and real estate.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 people are expected to inspect the Tinley Park model home this Sunday.

HAPPY DAYS IN THE GREEN FOREST

THESE were happy days in the Forest. At least they were happy for Lightfoot the Deer. They were the happiest days he had ever known. You see, he had won beautiful, slender, young Miss Daintyfoot, and now she was no longer Miss Daintyfoot but Mrs. Lightfoot. Lightfoot was sure that there was no one anywhere so beautiful as she, and Mrs. Lightfoot knew that there was no one so handsome and brave as he.

Wherever Lightfoot went Mrs. Lightfoot went. He showed her all his favorite hiding places. He led her to his favorite eating places. She did not tell him she was already acquainted with every one of them, that she knew the Green Forest quite as well as he did. If he had stopped to think how day after day she had managed to keep out of his sight while he hunted for her, he would have known that there was little he could show her which she did not already know. But he didn't stop to think, and proudly led her from place to place. And Mrs. Lightfoot wisely expressed delight with all she saw quite as if it were all new.

Of course, all the little people of the Green Forest hurried to pay their respects to Mrs. Lightfoot. Lightfoot and to tell Lightfoot how glad they felt for him. And they really did feel glad. You see, they all loved Lightfoot and they knew that now he would be happier than ever and that there would be no danger of his leaving the Green Forest because of loneliness. The Green Forest would not be the same at all without Lightfoot the Deer.

Lightfoot told Mrs. Lightfoot all about the terrible days of the hunting season and how glad he was that she had not been in the Green Forest then. He told her how the hunters with terrible guns had given him no rest and how he had to swim the Big River to get away from the hounds.

"I know," replied Mrs. Lightfoot softly. "I know all about it. You see, there were hunters on the Great Mountain. In fact, that is how I happened to come down to the Green Forest. They hunted me so up there that I did not dare stay, and I came down here thinking that there might be fewer hunters here. I would not have believed that I could ever be thankful to hunters for anything, but I am; truly I am."

There was a puzzled look on Lightfoot's face. "What for?" he demanded. "I can't imagine anybody being thankful to hunters for anything."

"Oh, you stupid!" cried Mrs. Lightfoot. "Don't you see that if I hadn't been driven down from the Great Mountain I never would have found you?"

"You mean I never would have found you," retorted Lightfoot. "I guess I owe those hunters more than you do. I owe them the greatest happiness I have ever known, but I never would have thought of it myself. Isn't it queer how things which seem the very worst possible sometimes turn out to be the very best possible?"

COOK BOOK

A DAY WITH SAUCES

SAUCE making is an art, for many dishes are made by the addition of a well-seasoned and appropriate sauce. The use of flour for thickening sauces is liked by the majority of cooks, though cornstarch makes a more delicate and smooth sauce. Its only drawback is it needs good cooking to remove the raw taste of the starch. When using cornstarch for thickening mix it with a little cold water, milk or fruit juice and add to the hot liquid, then it will cook smooth. Use half as much cornstarch as flour, if the recipe calls for flour. For pudding and other dessert sauces, one may follow the recipe and have good results, provided that the base of the sauce is properly made.

A delicious sauce which may be used with duck, goose, turkey, game or chicken is:

Brown Orange Sauce.

Take two cupfuls of meat stock or two cans of bouillon, or two teaspoonfuls of vegetable extract of bouillon, or three bouillon cubes in two cupfuls of water. Season the stock with one-half teaspoonful each of white pepper and paprika, a dash of cayenne, one cupful of orange juice, two oranges, pulp and slice of rind. Cook five minutes. Take from the fire and stand a few minutes. Brown two tablespoonfuls of flour, add the butter and brown, then blend well until smooth. Add to the stock slowly, stirring all the time. Return to a double boiler and cook, beating occasionally with an egg beater. Add one-half cupful of white grapes skinned and seeded.

With these two sauces, white and brown, one may make thousands of sauces suitable to serve on salads, desserts, fritters, and dishes without number.

A most delightful sauce to serve on buttered toast in place of the usual cream or milk toast is:

Celery Sauce.

Cut the celery into small pieces and cook in boiling water, using as little as possible. Drain, reserving the water. Now prepare the ordinary white sauce

THE GATES

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WE WALK the streets of some strange town,
But we meet Smith, and we pass Brown,

See houses where we do not dwell,
Yet, seeing, see our own as well;
We walk strange cities up and down,
Strange streets with nothing new to tell.

They are as we are, we as they,
The men we meet along the way:
Some care of ours that grieves the mind

Is not some grief of some strange kind;
If we could see, if they would say,
The selfsame sorrows we would find.

Yes, if one really understands,
Why talk of towns, or states, or lands
Why talk of lands or town or states,
While every door some step awaits?

God made all hills, all vales, all strands,
But man, not God, put up the gates.

Mauritius, a British island to the east of Madagascar, was the home of the now extinct dodo, a large pigeon with rudimentary wings. Its passing led to the popular saying: "As dead as the dodo." "Paul and Virginia" was written in Mauritius, the tropical beauty of the island supplying the background for the romantic French novel.

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Start using these delicious, effective anti-acid, gently laxative wafers today. Professional samples sent free to registered physicians or dentists if request is made on professional letterhead. Select Products, Inc., 4402 23rd St., Long Island City, N. Y.

Washington.—One swallow does not make a summer nor does one statement, even though from a high official, make a condition absolute. But one statement from a high official under the present New Deal relief setup comes rather close to disclosing the transcendent importance of the nation's relief problem in American economy at this time.

I refer to the recent testimony by Harry A. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator and professional reliever, before the house committee on appropriations. He told that group a few days ago that 3,553,000 heads of families or unattached persons were receiving a livelihood for themselves and their families from the federal government on March first of this year. If this be true, and it can hardly be disproved, there are nearly fifteen million persons dependent directly upon federal assistance. And the condition appears even worse when it is shown that about ten million others are receiving assistance from state, county and city relief or charitable organizations. In short, the Hopkins testimony reveals that about twenty per cent of all of our people are living on relief money.

These figures are astounding. They are made the more amazing when one considers that the condition exists even after the New Deal has expended approximately twenty-one billions in its three years of government management, the bulk of the outgo being directly chargeable to what Mr. Roosevelt has consistently maintained was an emergency.

I have reported to you intermittently heretofore the various stages through which Reliever Hopkins has gone in his search for means to solve the relief problem. I have been among those observers here who have felt that even though Mr. Hopkins lacks practical experience in commercial life and even though he casts aside every consideration except those inherent in the minds of a man who has devoted his life professionally to relief work, that he should be given time to solve the problem. It seems to me, however, that he has had ample time to find the answer if he is ever going to provide a solution. Neither he nor President Roosevelt has given any indication yet that they know the answer or even have a clue to it. The net result of their efforts to date has been the expenditure of money in unprecedented amounts and the piling up of a debt, the like of which this country never has known.

Mr. Hopkins has gone about his job smugly and with that apparent complacency that characterizes the official who is convinced that he alone is equipped to do a particular job. By his attitude, he has created in congress a feeling that he thinks he is a superior being and if anything makes a congressman hot under the collar, it is to see a member of the executive branch exhibit a pose that the congressmen are dumbbells. Some of them are, of course, but that is not true of all and it is fast doing Mr. Hopkins no good at all to show arrogance towards the men who go out and campaign directly for the votes of the people.

I said that the relief problem was of transcendent importance in governmental affairs at this time. That is true because I believe the conviction is growing that the whole New Deal policy on relief is impractical and visionary; that it is founded upon a wrong psychology; that it is creating in this nation the greatest mass of panhandlers and "the world owes me a living" type or class of individuals that has ever existed anywhere and that, in addition the men who are doing the job for the federal government lack the ability to understand its whole significance.

As proof of the observations I have just stated, let me point out how the demands for vast expenditures of money and wholesale methods of relief for the destitute have subsided in congress. Time was when a half dozen so-called welfare workers, college professors or organization leaders could get a hearing by the simple crook of a finger before a congressional committee. Such men as Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, and Senator Costigan of Colorado, and the late Senator Cutting of New Mexico, to mention only a few, would weep salty tears in senate speeches; they would call for ten billions for this and five billions for that and other billions for other things and shout that people were starving in the midst of plenty. And they were starving in the midst of plenty, but the shouting and the tumult raised by these political saviors did not provide a solution for the problem. I have a hunch that the silence of such men as these through the last year can mean only that they now see they were off on the wrong foot. They cannot help but realize that their theories were all wet, because Mr. Hopkins certainly has disproved the value of their plans.

Another indication of how congress feels is the movement to divide the billion and a half relief fund, which President Roosevelt asked, between

Mr. Hopkins and Public Works Administrator Ickes. The President demanded that congress give the whole fund to Mr. Hopkins. It probably will work out that way eventually but the feeling against Mr. Hopkins cannot be denied. It is violent and only a small part of it has come to the surface.

The congressmen could not afford to see the flow of money cut off in an election year so they maneuvered to spank Mr. Hopkins by seeking to give a portion of the money to Mr. Ickes.

Now, it is currently rumored that Mr. Ickes, who never has liked Mr. Hopkins, has done some lobbying in the fine underground manner of which he is capable. He sincerely believes that the use of funds in the construction of permanent things like buildings, roads and bridges gives the government and taxpayers at least something for their money. But, he that as it may, the ground swell against Mr. Hopkins is very powerful and if Mr. Hopkins possessed any understanding of the science of the times he would see it. Thus far he has given no indication that he understands what it means.

Where will it all end?
The answer to this relief problem is not now near enough to hazard a guess.

Let us go back for a brief review. When President Roosevelt took hold of the relief problem early in his administration, he advanced two theories. They were to solve our problems and solve them quickly. He urged the NRA and the PWA, which with the AAA, formed the first battalion of the alphabetical army. The NRA was designed to regiment business and indirectly force reemployment by the shortening of hours and the spread of work. The PWA was to provide a lot of construction jobs immediately, giving work to those not absorbed in private commerce and industry and thus take up the slack until buying power of individuals had been restored.

By November, 1933, it became quite evident to unbiased observers that NRA and PWA were falling short of the mark. So, out of the Presidential hat came the CWA. Congress promptly provided funds so the Civil Works administration—and here is where professional reliever, Mr. Hopkins, came on the scene—could hire unemployed who had not been absorbed by PWA or had not been restored to jobs in commerce and industry by NRA.

It was not long until CWA was as much in disrepute as the original schemes for providing employment. I believe it was in even greater disrepute because ordinary citizens could see the utter waste and the reckless expenditures of money occurring under CWA for its relief raking and stone gathering and other nonsensical job-creating results. CWA went the way of any unsound proposition.

Forward then came FERA. It was a proposition of emergency relief. Washington writers were deluged with speeches and statements that none should be allowed to starve. The spigots of the treasury were opened wide and $4,880,000,000 gushed forth. In every section of the country, federal money was distributed and distributors in Washington were none too careful of how they passed it out. In parallel lines with FERA, the politicians formed to the right. They saw the money and from precinct to pinnacle of politics, they were on the job and they have been on the job ever since.

Last year, the President became convinced that there was too much waste; that FERA was building up a clientele of millions who were saying, both publicly and privately, that it was no use to work when the government would feed them and he ordered a quick change in course.

With this change in course came a locking of horns between Messrs. Hopkins and Ickes. Mr. Ickes was licked by the simple expedient of a new federal agency. Bounding forth came Mr. Hopkins' own brain child, WPA. While it stands for Works Progress administration, a different name, the initials, to those who have studied the situation, spell FERA and CWA combined. The President announced to the country that "this business of relief must end." Those who could not be employed must be taken care of by the states and local governments and those who were employable would be taken off relief but they must do work for the funds which the federal government passed out to them. The result has been a considerable mess and there is not a day goes by that congressional mail does not reveal cruel results, absolute destitution and hardship and privation unparalleled in the United States.

Where will it all end?
"This business of relief" is still relief by whatever name the alphabetical agency in Washington may be known. It can be only relief and there can be no doubt that it must be continued.

Although President Roosevelt had demonstrated his willingness to make shifts in his program, it is becoming more and more evident that a fundamental alteration of his whole scheme must be undertaken.

TALL TALES

As Told to:

FRANK E. HAGAN and
ELMO SCOTT WATSON

The Absent-Minded Carpenter

WHEN Charles G. Grant, former Ohio newspaper man, was a boy in Columbus he knew a carpenter named J. Elmer Putterbaugh who was just about the best in the business. No job was ever too big for him to tackle, according to Mr. Grant. "Why, I remember the time," he says, "when J. Elmer took the contract to build a big church over near Washington Court House. He got so interested in his work that he forgot to stop. So the main aisle was so long that they had to have two preachers—one to stand at the altar and marry folks and the other to stand at the front door and christen their first baby as they came out."

Another time J. Elmer's absent-mindedness got him in trouble. He was shingling the roof on a barn when a thick fog came sweeping up the valley from the Ohio river. J. Elmer kept right on shingling and without noticing what he was doing shingled 26 feet of fog beyond the edge of the roof before he noticed his mistake.

This turned out to be pretty serious because he fell and broke one of his legs off clean when he tried to get down. As a result he had to have a wooden leg, but that meant more trouble. Every time J. Elmer reached down to scratch his knee cap he'd get a splinter in his finger. That made him so angry that he'd grab his saw and saw his wooden leg right off. It broke him up buying new wooden legs. At last he went to a pauper's grave.

"But they had a hard time keeping him in it," declares Mr. Grant. "You see, J. Elmer was something of a crossroads philosopher—just full of wise saws. His ghost used one of these to saw his way out of the pine box in which they buried him. Folks got pretty tired of having his ghost chasing around at night. So they finally captured it, enclosed it in a box of chilled steel and from that time on there has been nothing but frozen silence out of J. Elmer Putterbaugh."

The Crazy Woman Wrangler

AT QUIGLEY was a cow hand, temporarily, for Half Circle ranch near Buffalo, Wyo.; it was there he met the wrangler from Crazy Woman River and heard his story.

"I was a tenderfoot," acknowledges Quigley. "So much so, I'd rise at daybreak, saddle up and ride to Buffalo to eat hash house breakfast with the rest of the Chinamen.

"One morning another rider yelled at me, back trail, but I paid no attention. Figured he'd spotted me for a tenderfoot cause I wore the only stiff-brimmed Stetson of the county.

"Catching up, the stranger introduced himself as the Wrangler from Crazy Woman River. An old fellow, but plenty pert and capable. Pointing to a grove we passed, the wrangler said that there, after a night in Buffalo, he met a bear. Had only a rifle and just three .22 shorts—not much to use if you're loading for bear.

"He drew careful bead and fired. The bear went down. Then he was up. It was like the radio report of a prize-fight. My friend aimed and fired. Again the bear fell, once more was up. Aiming carefully over his horse's neck, the man from Crazy Woman fired his last .22 and saw the bear fall.

"Leaping down, Bowie knife in hand, he charged. And he was tremendously relieved to discover three bears, all dead in the trail. . . .

"I believe the story implicitly," says Quigley. "You see, this Crazy Woman fellow never once regarded me as a tenderfoot, but he treated me like an old-timer on the range."

It's a Ringer!

ONE subscriber to the belief that, in the long run, truth must prevail is John D. McDougall, nestor among grain receivers in the Chicago market.

"Here is the proof of what I am compelled to tell," Mr. McDougall asserted, indicating a sheaf of beautifully ripened wheat. "The facts concern a friend and customer of mine, one A. J. Sundberg of Hillsboro, N. D."

"Sundberg shipped this sample of fine wheat. When I complimented him upon its quality he relaxed, as most folks do under the influence of praise, and he recalled some of the difficulties under which the grain grew.

"Why, even at a time this wheat was ripening—my friend told me—he hitched his wagon team to a weeping willow tree out in the fields and responded to the cheery invitation of the dinner bell.

"He was gone 41 minutes but grasshoppers invaded the place in such numbers they devoured both horses and all of the wagon except its tongue. When my friend finished his dinner all that was left of the horses was their shoes. And the grasshoppers were playing quints with them."

Presidential Franks

Since the early days of the nation Presidents of the United States have been authorized to frank their mail, that is, send it post-free. Early laws, says Pathfinder Magazine, required the President's actual signature "written by his own hand" but from the time of Hayes on the well known "penalty" envelope has been used. More recently the custom has been to use the simple inscription, "The White House."

New Slit Sleeves and Youthful Bodice Go With This Spectator Sports Frock

Pattern No. 1868-B

Some are chosen and some are not, as you remember. And this is one of the "summer" chosen! A pretty bad pun, but this perfectly stunning spectator sports frock makes up for it. And you can wear it yourself when summer sets in if you'll send for the pattern now.

It is surprisingly easy to make, and with the aid of the step-by-step chart, illustrating the cut and fit of the new slit sleeves and the way to pleat and stitch-up the youthful bodice, you will immediately realize how automatically it goes together. The bodice has a lot of blouse to it, even makes you suspect that it's held underneath by an elastic band, and the side pleats of the skirt harmonize beautifully with the action pleats in the back blouse.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1868-B is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34) requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material. Send fifteen cents for the pattern.

Garden Club

"Flower Lovers Attention Please". The Tinley Park Garden Club wishes to announce the flower show for 1936 will be held early in September.

Plant seeds now so there will be plenty of lovely blooms for then.

Be sure to encourage the children to plant flowers and vegetables so they may have a chance to exhibit and be the proud winners of some nice blue ribbons. We feel this is a very nice pastime for the little folks because they are the gardeners of tomorrow. It also helps to cultivate a love for nature so they will not destroy flowers but will help to preserve the beauties of Mother Nature.

Our motto is: "Enjoy, but do not destroy".

Plans will be underway soon to make this one of our loveliest shows, so those of you who have gardens and flowers, please keep in mind to watch for news from time to time to help us make this the best show we ever had.

Remember every little posey will have its place.

More news soon.
Flower Show Chairman.

Chevrolet dealers' used car sales for the first six months of the current model year will reach the staggering total of more than 900,000 units.

This announcement by W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, was a highlight of an interview this week, in which Mr. Holler pointed out that his company's record-breaking new car volume is giving used car prospects an exceptionally wide assortment from which to choose. High volume sales of used cars, he said, are the natural outcome of the public's recognition that these offerings are sound transportation values.

"While the figures are remarkable," said Mr. Holler, "they are easily understandable in light of what happened last November when the new Chevrolet was announced. The 1936 models received the most enthusiastic welcome of any new cars in the history of the company. In spite of the fact that dealers had been stocked in advance, it was necessary to maintain production at high levels all winter to keep pace with the demand.

"Such a situation can be accounted for only by the explanation that thousands of owners who would normally have driven their y old cars a year or two longer were so strongly impressed by the new Chevrolet that they bought at once. As a matter of fact, the word, 'old' in this connection is not at all accurate; for a high percentage of the trade-ins since November 2 have not been old cars at all, but recent models with thousands of miles of satisfactory service left.

"The trading-in of these cars has had the result of increasing the quality, and also the variety, of dealers' used car stocks. Through the medium of advertising, Chevrolet has gone systematically about the job of acquainting the public with this situation, with special stress on the fact that the Chevrolet Red OK Tag—now, by the way, nearly 11 years old—makes it possible to buy a used car with full confidence. The newspapers of the United States have carried the bulk of this advertising, and the schedule is being increased in preparation for further record sales this spring."

Church and Sunday School

Tinley Park Methodist Church
Paul L. Hastings, Minister

The annual observance of Mother's Day has become almost traditional in the Christian Church. Next Sunday we shall share in that observance by building our eleven o'clock service around the theme of "the Christian Home." Our interpretation of what constitutes a Christian home will naturally not be limited to Mother, but will include Father and Children as well.

As a very special treat in music we are to have as our guests the Music Hour Club of the Tinley Park Grade School. Through the cooperation of their student officers and faculty sponsors this group is preparing music appropriate to the occasion. The group will present their part of the service at the very beginning of the hour, namely, at eleven o'clock. This provision is made so that those wishing to attend services at other churches may be dismissed as soon as the club has sung for us. This will mean that all persons wishing to attend our service should be on hand by 10:55 at the latest. The church will be dismissed early enough to permit entrance to the auditorium by 10:50 a. m. this Sunday.

The ministry and membership of this church wishes to extend to all persons in the community who are seeking a constructively liberal interpretation of the Christian message an invitation to share in its services and membership. In a chaotic age such as ours, the Church must play a vital part in the life of the world if we are ever to build a society in keeping with our ideals and capacities. We believe that this church will prove especially attractive to all who are seeking a religious life set forth in terms of modern scholarship and devoted to the increasing discovery of truth, regardless of what that discovery may cost us. We invite you to learn to know our people and to participate in our activities.

We shall be very glad to have a large number of flowers for our services each Sunday, now that the springtime season seems to have arrived.

Unfair Competition

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Picture a store-keeper, a dairy-farmer, or a small manufacturer who through years of industry has established a moderately successful business. Out of its returns he supports his family, and pays wages, taxes, insurance and all the other costs that such enterprise entails.

Then into his community enters a competitor. This rival is more fortunately situated. He doesn't have to worry about making a living, or meeting tax bills, or showing a favorable balance at the end of the year. A rich uncle takes care of all that for him.

How long could the store-keeper, or dairy-farmer, or manufacturer continue to meet such competition?

That, in effect, is the question raised by an official report recently submitted at Washington by the Committee on Government Competition with Private Enterprise.

It reaches the conclusion that, except in such fields as national defense, research, conservation and the like, Federal competition is "wholly destructive."

What attention will official Washington give this significant report? That is difficult to say.

For years, citizens who have seen their own taxes used to underwrite competition against them have protested against those methods—without success.

For years, they have pointed out that government competes against private enterprise in more than 200 lines—including certain agricultural products, construction materials, harness, textiles, clothing, printing and a host of others.

For years they have pointed out what the Committee now emphasizes in its report. Namely:

"That government expenditures will be reduced and revenue increased if the Federal Government withdraws from competition with private enterprise except under the conditions specified.

"That under normal economic conditions government competition with private enterprise . . . contributes to the development of a socialized industry.

"That a revival of private industry will permit the return of labor to its normal occupations, will hasten the return to American standards of efficiency and maintain the dignity of labor which has made the American working man the nation's greatest single influence for the advancement of democratic ideals."

Protests of the nation's workers and taxpayers against Bureaucracy's unfair competition have gone unheeded. Will an official report fare any better in protecting them in their constitutional right to earn a living? Let's hope so.

In the words of the report itself, "The government's true function is to protect and promote the economic activities of its citizens—not to supplant them."

V.F.W. News

Don C. Hall, Jr., Publicity Chairman

Wm. Martin Post 725 V. F. W.

Those elements and forces which would have us abandon the ideals and traditions of this country's democratic form of government, can make but little headway and no real gains against America's eternal answer, "One country, one language, one flag." Sporadic "red" outbreaks here and there, insidious propaganda in our schools and colleges, the deliberate blinding of certain minorities of our people to the true purposes of communism and other "isms"—these seem trivial and harmless when compared to the spontaneous and sincere response of this entire nation and its people to the summons of Americanization Day and other annual national patriotic anniversaries.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States is composed of more than 3,400 local units in every state and in many foreign lands, (whose memberships comprise men who have had actual personal experience in the zone of warfare during America's participation in the war with Spain, the Chinese Boxer Rebellion, the Philippine Insurrection, the World War, Nicaraguan campaigns and other overseas service for which the United States government issues campaign medals.) Such men, who have undergone hardships and risked their lives in defense of American principles and American liberty, have a deep personal sense of patriotic responsibility. To them, American citizenship is a privilege which entails reciprocal duties. Our members do not consider that their war service forever fulfilled their obligations to the Stars and Stripes. Every one of our local units, under the direction of a National Department of Americanism, is engaged in an active Americanism program with which it seeks to develop a higher form of citizenship; loyalty to the American flag; civic, state and national welfare; the individual welfare of all its people and the preservation of the American nation of, for, and by Americans.

The Americanism program of the VFW also takes into consideration the combating of subversive activities of which Americanization Day is in itself an outstanding feature. By keeping in constant close touch with such anti-American campaigns and programs, the VFW is able to unveil much of their danger. Not only our own membership, but the country as a whole, is kept well informed concerning the trickery and deceit, the plotting against our Constitution and our form of government, by the forces which would seek to substitute the red flag of communism for the Stars and Stripes of America. Wear a Buddy Poppy Memorial Day!

LOCAL FARMERS RANK HIGH IN USING LAND BANK LOANS

Will County ranks among the ten Illinois counties with the largest number of farm mortgage loans obtained through the Federal Land Bank System in force, an analysis by the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis shows.

In this county, a total of 514 farmers have Federal Land Bank loans or land bank commissioner loans, or a combination of the two, totaling $4,252,000 as of December 31, 1935. Of this number, 92 were Federal land bank loans closed during the year, and written for terms of from 20 to 34 1/2 years.

One of the interesting points disclosed by the analysis is that Illinois farmers have not materially increased their total farm mortgage indebtedness. Refinancing of farm loans for liquidating banks, for private individuals and lending institutions, new purchases of land, and a voluntary change of mortgage by farmers to take advantage of low interest rates accounts for the large number of land bank loans in the county. For the state as a whole about 30 per cent of all the farm mortgage indebtedness is carried by farmers in Federal land bank and Land Bank Commissioner loans.

It is significant that the leading counties are those which are also high in value of land per acre based on agricultural production. The ten leading counties in Illinois are Vermillion, Iroquois, Champaign, LaSalle, Lee, Montgomery, Macoupin, McLean and Shelby tied and Will.

All Federal land bank borrowers are voting members of their national farm loan associations. In Will County, J. Franklin Hedgecock, of Joliet, serves as secretary-treasurer of the Will County National Farm Loan Association. The directors are Chas. R. Bar, Manhattan, president; A. H. Grunewald, Plainfield; J. W. Patterson, Plainfield; M. Homer George, Plainfield and John E. Francis, New Lenox.

A Telephone Can't Milk a Cow!

Even a cow would be amused at such an idea. Although no milkmaid, the telephone does have its definite place on every farm—in fact, it is indispensable! It may mean the difference between risk and security for family and property. It often means the best prices in selling and the best bargains in buying. In dollars and cents it saves and earns more than it costs. And its cost? . . . so little that a very small saving or profit from its use will pay for it.

It is just as natural to think of the past in Scotland as to think of the present in America. New Ways With CORN

THE day has passed for the intelligent housewife when a can of corn was just a can of corn. She knows enough now to look at the label, and select the style of corn best suited to the dish she has in mind. She knows that creamy style corn is scraped from the cob, making a milky mixture, and that this is good for soups and cooked dishes. She knows that whole grain corn is cut from the cob in individual kernels and prefers it for succotash or served plain as a vegetable. She may even know that roasting ears of corn are now vacuum packed, four to a can, and that this corn has extremely small cobs and large deep sweet kernels. All she has to do with the ears is to heat them from three to five minutes in boiling water.

Recent Recipes

The next thing for her to know is some good recipes for corn dishes. Here are two recent ones in which whole grain canned corn should be used. Both are quantity recipes.

Corn Salad: Marinate the contents of three 12-ounce cans whole kernel corn and one and a half cups grated or finely-chopped raw carrot in one cup French dressing for an hour or so in the refrigerator. Add one cup shredded ripe olives, and serve in a nest of lettuce. Serves twenty-four.

Corn Fritters: Chop contents of one 10½-ounce can whole kernel yellow Bantam corn, or put through a food chopper. Add two well-beaten eggs and one-fourth cup milk. Then add two-thirds cup flour, one teaspoon salt and one-half teaspoon baking powder. Drop by spoonfuls into hot fat or drippings in a skillet and brown on both sides. Good served with chicken. Makes sixteen.

Wild Bill Cummings Misses Lucky Seven

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—A big seven is a lucky number for Wild Bill Cummings but last year he tried to make it the "hard way."

In 1934, Bill had a nice big seven on his car when he drove it to victory in the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway but by the very virtue of his victory, he lost his favorite numeral.

Car numbers are allotted at Indianapolis according to the championship rating of the drivers, Cummings being national champion earned and was required to use No. 1. The former Indianapolis bundle-boy was in a blue funk. He wanted his favorite No. 7 but Lou Moore rated that digit and couldn't switch it even if he so desired.

Bill eyed the tail of his car sadly as the official sign painter inscribed a two-foot No. 1 upon it. It was the number everyone would have been proud to carry but it didn't spell luck to Cummings. Then the whistle blew and the number artist went to lunch. Bill seized a small brush and at the base of the figure one, very small and faintly, he put "+ 6."

But, as the gamblers say, he was trying it the "hard way" and Bill finished third in the race last year but second in national standing. This year he must carry No. 2 with, perhaps, a small "+ 5."

Sharp Eye Prevents Race Car Disaster

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The "all-seeing-eyes" of the technical committee, which rules the mechanical destiny of racing cars at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, had a most benevolent squint at Rex Mays' mount last year and possibly saved him from disaster.

The lanky Californian took the lead in the 500-Mile grind at the start and, by superior driving, held it for 225 miles, making one pit stop to take on fuel at the 160-mile marker. Kelly Petillo, eventual winner, overtook him at the 250-mile halfway mark but Mays was still in a splendid position to contest the victory.

Running on a perfect pit schedule, Mays came in at 300 miles to take on more gasoline and check his tires. He was serviced quickly and was ready to start out again in pursuit of the little Italian when the eagle eye of a member of the technical committee detected something wrong about the front end of his car. A more thorough investigation disclosed a broken front spring bracket. It could not be repaired and Mays was forced to quit the race. Had not the broken part been noticed, Mays would have driven on into certain trouble.

Rebuilt Indianapolis Motor Speedway Promises Faster 500-Mile Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The Indianapolis Motor Speedway had its face lifted this year and awaits the 24th running of the annual 500-mile race here on May 30 capable of greater speed with infinitely more safety.

A new, reinforced concrete, perpendicular outside retaining wall now surrounds the two-and-a-half-mile track, making it almost impossible for the swift-moving cars to surmount it. The four famous turns have been completely resurfaced with rock asphalt and the track widened from 40 to 50 feet on the inside of all the curves.

"When the Indianapolis Motor Speedway was constructed, its designers anticipated speeds for 25 years," says T. E. "Pop" Myers, general manager. "This year we felt that we should remodel the track to take care of the increasing speeds of the future and at the same time maintain every safety precaution. A road engineer assisted us in the new construction and it should make for a more interesting as well as safer race this year."

Babe Stapp and Wild Bill Cummings, the latter winner of the 1934 race, were the first two veteran drivers to test the new course and both were loud in their praise for it.

"The new surface on the turns rides smooth as glass but has a grip that assures us of safe driving at high speed," says Cummings. "I believe that I can drive the new track a second quicker on each turn which should enable both myself and the other drivers to set new track records this year with safety."

"We don't have to find the groove now because it's all groove," says Stapp. "We can drive anywhere we want in the turns. There's plenty of room for speed with safety."

SYNOPSIS

The Duke, Barry Gilbert, likable youth of twenty-three, jobless and broke, enters an unoccupied summer home in Southampton, seeking shelter from a storm. He makes himself at home, dozing at the fireplace, he is startled by the arrival of a butler, Willetts; and a chauffeur, Evans. He learns that the son of the owner of the house, Jack Ridder, whom the servants had never seen, is expected. He decides to bluff it out. His supposed parents have left for Germany. Next morning he is given a letter for his "mother." He opens it and finds a message from the real Jack, saying he could not come, and returning a hundred-dollar bill. The boy's father had pensioned him into obscurity. Barry pockets the money, intending to return it later. He orders Evans to take him to Montauk, intending to disappear there. On the way he meets Judge Hambridge and his daughter, Patricia. Believing he is Jack Ridder, she invites him to dinner the following Thursday. Barry returns to Southampton, deciding to stay a bit longer. Mr. Ridder, Sr., through his newspaper, the Globe, accuses Judge Hambridge of taking orders from Tammany Hall in a condemnation proceeding. Barry meets Peter Winslow, prominent attorney. Winslow tells Barry that Judge Hambridge had seen an accident in which a woman was killed by a taxicab. At home Barry finds the wife of the real Jack Ridder awaiting him. Her husband is in jail in New York, charged with the murder of Mike Kelly, Tammany boss. The girl, Peggy, tells Barry how she had met Jack in Florida and married him, as Jay Rogers. Jack lost his job, and they went to New York, where she got work at the Coconut Bar. There she was accused of trying to pick the pocket of Mike Kelly, and was arrested. Her husband went to Kelly's to induce him to drop the charge. Later Kelly was found dead, his skull crushed by a decanter. Barry suggests he can help as Jack Ridder, and Mrs. Rogers agrees. Judge Hambridge delivers a decision in the condemnation suit in which Kelly had been interested. Barry cables Mrs. Ridder for $2,000. Winslow takes Rogers' case. Barry gets a job on the Globe under his true name. The editor, Ernie Harwood, assigns him to cover the Kelly murder.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

He had turned into a cheap restaurant, near The Globe, where the slim young man had promised to meet him. Lurching, he mapped out his immediate future. Work-days, Barry Gilbert would live in the little rooms he'd taken Saturday. Week-ends, of course, he'd have to spend at Southampton, as John Clarke Ridder, Jr. That was essential to his contact with Bad Nauheim. And to another, even more essential contact. He was to dine at the Hambridges again next Friday, he recalled—with the lady from Boston to whom Pat must have written flattering things about him. A grand girl, Pat, and suddenly, as we have seen, not altogether unattainable. "If I make good," Barry thought, "I can tell her the truth about myself, and ask her to marry me. Why not? All this John Clarke Ridder, Jr., business'll just seem funny then."

The slim young man arrived in due time, and duly presented his charge at the homicide bureau. First, there was Tim Laugherty, as Irish as Barry, and with almost as ready a grin. They took to each other immediately. "Barry Gilbert," Tim repeated. "Well, the name's all right, anyway."

Tim regarded the Kelly murder as a closed case. So did MacDevitt, and everyone else Barry met at headquarters. "The Rogers kid done it, that's sure," Tim declared. "This Filipino says he didn't let nobody else in that night."

"Maybe somebody else let himself in."

Tim smiled scornfully. "How?" There was a new lock on that door. Show him the keys, Mac. Mac obliged.

"Here you are," he said. "It was chained to Kelly's pants button."

"Show him the decanter. Maybe he can get something out of that."

"Why not?" Mac laughed. "There's about half a pint in it."

It was a gruesome exhibit—that bottle which had killed a man. Real cut glass, and nearly a quarter full of reddish liquor. "Wonder why that didn't spill out," Barry ventured.

"Maybe the cork stopped it," Tim replied.

"They didn't find any finger prints?"

"No. The guy must have worn gloves."

"Listen," Barry ventured again. "Why weren't the Filipino's finger prints on the bottle—if he served it?"

"Guess he wore gloves, too. My butler always does."

At least, not when he opened the front door.

"Say, Charlie," Tim began; "let us in. We want to ask you sumpin'. Do you wear gloves when you're serving stuff?"

"Sometimes."

"Did you wear 'em that night?"

"Maybe. I don't remember."

He was a thin, sallow youth, with the usual glossy black hair brushed back from his forehead. Nothing remarkable about him—not even his shiftiness. The three men stood in the broad hall of the Kelly house, and Charlie repeated the tale of admitting Rogers, and hearing a quarrel, and returning to his room until the visitor left.

"You were in your room when the row started, then?" Barry asked.

"Yes, sir."

"And you could hear the voices pretty plainly?"

"Yes, sir."

"You came upstairs, and then went back to your room, and stayed there until just as Rogers was leaving?"

"Yes, sir."

"Kelly must have been dead then, if Rogers killed him?"

"Yes, sir."

"But you didn't hear the sound of a blow in your room, nor the thud of a body falling?"

No answer.

"If you could hear voices downstairs, don't you think you'd've heard that, if it had happened?"

The Filipino looked down from one inquisitor to the other.

"Maybe I didn't stay in my room," he said at last, very slowly. "I don't remember."

Tim was about to press the point when there was the rasp of a latch-key being thrust into the lock of the front door.

Then the knob turned, and Mrs. Kelly entered.

She stopped short at sight of the intruders.

The door remained opened.

"Well, Mr. Laugherty!" she exclaimed. "So you've come back again? With a friend, too! Why don't you step in the parlor?"

Tim thanked her, and presented Barry.

"Glad to meet you," Mrs. Kelly declared. "Run along, you"—to the Filipino. "Come on in, boys!"

"You're forgetting your key," Barry said.

He took it out of the lock.

"It's a brand new key, isn't it?" he asked, casually.

"Sure," Mrs. Kelly answered. "It's a new lock. Mike had it put on only a few days ago."

"How many keys were there?"

"Two. That one, and Mike's."

Barry was scribbling on the back of an envelope.

Mrs. Kelly was a large woman, in her fifties. Her hair was dyed red—a brilliant, aggressive red unknown to Nature. But she was affable, and extremely good-humored. Evidently, not grieving herself to death about Mike.

"Just dropped around to see Charlie," Tim said. "Anything you want to know, Mr. Gilbert?"

"Just one thing. Where were you the night of the murder?"

Mrs. Kelly laughed.

"You don't read the papers much, do you?"

"Why?"

"Because all about that was in The Herald Tribune the morning after the body was found."

"All about what?"

"All about my being up in Harlem at a dance."

"And what time did you get home?"

"Around daylight."

"Did you let yourself in?"

"Sure."

"And you didn't wonder where Mike was?"

"I thought he was asleep. We didn't room together. The lights was all out."

"No light in the front room?"

"No."

"Sure?"

"Dead sure. Anything else?"

"No, thanks. I didn't mean to keep you so long. But one thing led to another."

"That's all right," Mrs. Kelly assured him. "I got nothing to hide. Drop around any time you feel like it."

"No holes in that alibi," Tim said, as they reached the sidewalk.

"Straight shooter, she is. Ran a saloon when Mike married her. You certainly got wound up. What was all that about the latch key?"

"Bright and shiny, wasn't it?"

"Brand new. She told you that. So did I, when we were looking at Kelly's key-wallet."

"Yes," Barry admitted. "But there wasn't any new key in that wallet."

Tim Laugherty stopped short in Fifth avenue.

"You're right," he said.

"I've got the number," Barry went on, producing his envelope. "A 66152. Write that down. A plain, round head. Two of 'em. Where's the other?"

It never was in that wallet, because every hook's filled."

"Maybe he carried it loose in his pocket."

"Wherever he carried the key, where is it?"

"I don't know," Tim answered. "It wasn't on the body—that's sure."

By now, it was time for his dinner appointment with Peggy.

Still in high spirits, he walked around to her boarding house. Barry remembered Southampton with shame when he saw the Ridders' two shabby rooms. The boy lay in one of them; a bright youngster, five years old.

"The doctor doesn't seem to know what the matter is," Peggy declared.

"I know," Barry said. "I'd be sick in this dump. Why don't you bring him out to the country?"

Peggy shook her head.

"I want to be near Jack," she repeated.

"Winslow says he's likely to be free in a week."

Dining comfortably in a nearby cafe, he told her everything that had happened since their parting; all the astonishing events of that day. And, with the recital, Peggy's spirits rose, too. When Barry mentioned his new job, she actually laughed.

"That's funny," she said. "You're doing what the old man's real son wouldn't do."

"I've two reasons," Barry explained. "In the first place it puts me in a splendid position to help Jack. In the second—well, the fact is that I'm nuts about a girl, and I want to make good on her account."

"What's her name?"

"Patricia Hambridge. She lives at Southampton, and she and her father both knew the Ridders. They think I'm young Ridder, of course."

The next morning, Barry dropped in again on Pete Winslow. The lawyer had talked with Peggy's husband, and was persuaded of his innocence. They've got a prima facie case, though," he admitted. "The grand jury'll indict the boy, I'm afraid. We'll get him tried as quickly as possible, and there isn't the slightest chance of his conviction."

Peter leaned forward, his fingers intertwined between his knees.

"That was a shrewd question you asked that Filipino. Only I wish you'd asked it of me. He's prepared now. Never mind. When it comes to cross-examination—"

He rose, with the joy of battle in his eyes.

"But be careful about tipping our hand," he said. "Bring in Mrs. Rogers. I'd like to check up on her statement."

"Tomorrow?"

"Make it next week."

"He's a great lawyer," Ernie Harwood said, when Barry repeated as much of this conversation as it seemed wise to repeat. "And a wizard at cross-examination. I've seen him discredit one witness after another with mere monosyllables. Tell Winslow I may have a tip for him some day. It's nothing now. Just a phone call. But, if I ever find who it was—"

Barry devoted that evening to drafting a letter for the real Jack Ridder to copy and send to his mother. Something told him that whatever the boy wrote himself would be cold and resentful. That would make the old lady unhappy, and Barry didn't want her to be.

"I've got a job on father's paper," he wrote, with genuine pride. I've respected father's wish as to using his name—except at Southampton, of course. They had to know there. At The Globe, I'm on my own, and getting ahead. I'll be a credit to you yet, darling."

From that, he went into some detail as to his interest in the friend "locked up for murder he didn't commit," and the need of funds for his defense. Even to Jack Ridder, it was obvious that the letter had to be sent, so sent it was—in Jack Ridder's hand-writing—from the railway station post box at Southampton the following Friday. Barry arrived on an early afternoon train.

He had wired Evans to meet him, and found Willetts waiting in the front hall. There was no doubt now that the butler suspected something, and Barry, sure of what he suspected, faced him with a broad grin. "What's the matter with you, Willetts?"

"Matter, sir?"

"You've been acting queer ever since the night Mrs. Rogers sent here. I don't know what you heard that night?"

"Do you mean eavesdropping, sir?"

There was a pained surprise in the man's voice.

"Not me, sir. I've got my position to remember. I've been a butler with some of the best families."

"All right," Barry soothed him. "You think I'm back at the kind of behavior that alienated me from my father. Well, I'm not. That 'glittery lady' is the wife of a man I met in Florida. . . ."

And, for the third time that week, Barry related his story.

"She's a brave little kid," he concluded, "and she's in trouble up to her neck. I'm going to stand by her. I've got a job on my father's newspaper—under an assumed name, because I want to win out on my own. I've cabled my mother for money, and everything I can get goes to that lady until her husband can win on his own. I'm going to be in town most of the time now, working my head off."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for May 10

EFFECTUAL PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—Luke 18:1-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—God be merciful to me a sinner.—Luke 18:13.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How Two Men Prayed.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When Prayer Changes Things.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Should I Pray?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Shall We Pray Effectively?

From first to last the books of the Bible teem with the language and spirit of prayer. Prayers of every type are found in the Old Testament—personal confession and petition, intercession, and especially praise to Jehovah voiced in private and public prayers. The present lesson offers definite instruction by a great Teacher.

I. "Men Ought Always to Pray" (v. 1).

Prayer is necessary to spiritual life. What breathing is to the physical body prayer is to the spiritual existence. Men ought to pray under every variety of circumstance; in time of sorrow and burden, for strength to endure; in time of joy and success, for grace to behave aright.

Prayer ought to be persistent even when the answer is not immediately recognized. "All men pray at times," we are told. To the Christian alone belongs the faith-filled and persistent prayer. God hears and answers prayer, even when we do not understand the mysteries of delay.

II. The Urgent Prayer of a Widow (vv. 2-8).

The picture here is of a helpless widow who was being cheated out of her property rights, coming to a godless judge for redress. Her only means of getting help was persistently to declare the justice of her claim. He complied with her urgent request, not because he feared God or man, but to get rid of her. The point here is not that God is like this unjust judge, that he can be teased into compliance, but rather the teaching is by contrast. If through persistence the judge yields, how much surer is the help of a merciful God for the elect who cry unto him day and night. The believer's prayer is to a covenant-keeping God. This is why the truth concerning the coming of Christ is of such meaning. The church should pray for the fulfillment of God's promise, and not be disheartened and discouraged, as are some (II Pet. 3:4). Though many may despair, we should be assured that genuine faith will abide and that the divine promise concerning the coming of Christ will be fulfilled.

III. The Prayer of the Proud Pharisee (vv. 9-12).

1. He took a striking attitude (v. 11). The Jewish custom was to stand while praying, but the word "stood" implies the assumption of ostentation. He was self-righteous and trusted in himself.

2. He prayed with himself (vv. 11, 12). He was merely soliloquizing, pretending to thank God, while really complimenting himself. He congratulated himself upon his morality (v. 11). He claimed to thank God that he was not as other men: extortioners, adulterers, unjust, or even as the publican standing afar off. One who has been kept from the grosser sins ought to thank God, but should not set himself above his fellow men, as though the virtue were his own. He congratulated himself for his religious merit (v. 12). He fasted twice a week and gave tithes of all he possessed. He thus informed God that he did even more than was required.

IV. The Prayer of the Humble Publican (v. 13).

How great the contrast in the prayer and spirit of the publican! He did not stand with ostentation, but for very shame could not so much as lift up his face to heaven, but smote upon his breast, a sign of anguish and despair, and cried "God be merciful to me a sinner." That this heart-cry is indeed the heart of the lesson is indicated from the fact that it is cited as the golden text.

V. Christ's Testimony (v. 14).

Christ makes it unmistakably evident that the attitude and petition of the publican meets with his favor. Pharisees of every age, for their pride and self-righteousness are rejected of God. The spirit of the publican expressing itself in the prayer of a penitent, will today meet with the commendation, "This man went down to his house justified."

The believer who weighs thoughtfully the meaning of this lesson will find much encouragement to prayer. He must be justified, knowing his sins forgiven in answer to penitential prayer. He must pray in spite of a natural impulse to faint, to neglect the practice of prayer; he ought always to pray, and not faint.

A Harsh Word

To be silent, to suffer, to pray when we cannot act, is acceptable to God. A disappointment, a contradiction, a harsh word received and endured in his presence, is worth more than a long prayer.—Fenelon.

Ennobling Our Work

Our daily life should be sanctified by doing common things in a religious way. There is no action so slight or so humble but it might be done to a great purpose or ennobled thereby.—G. MacDonald.

Household Questions

A cloth dipped in vinegar and rubbed over the kitchen stove before it is blacked will remove all the grease that may have accumulated on it.

Flannels and blankets will keep soft and white and will not shrink if washed with a tablespoon of ammonia in the water.

To remove soiled places on the children's rompers and play clothes dip garments in water, sprinkle with granulated soap powder, roll up and put to soak in the bottom of tub.

When making gravies, allow one and one-half teaspoons of flour to each cup of liquid. Mix flour to a paste with cold water and add to hot liquid.

To keep celery crisp thoroughly wash it and cut for serving. Place it in a cheese-cloth bag and store it in a cold place.

Soiled white window shades may be successfully painted on one side with a coat of flat white paint and with green paint on the other side.

One teaspoonful of onion juice added to each quart of potatoes gives them a different flavor.

Grease spots can be removed from washable materials with warm water and soap as in ordinary laundering if care is taken to rub spot thoroughly. Soap containing naphtha or kerosene is efficient.

Paste an envelope on the inside cover of your cook book to hold recipes you have clipped and want to save.

Probably the most accurate mathematical memory on record is possessed by Mademoiselle Osage, aged twenty-two, of Paris, France. She can raise a number to its tenth power by mental arithmetic, and can extract the root of a number of the same power in less than a minute.

There was a dense summer fog and the officer on the bridge was becoming more and more exasperated. As he leaned over the side of the bridge trying to pierce the gloom he saw a hazy figure leaning on a rail a few yards from his ship. He almost choked. "What do you think you're doing with your blinking ship?" he roared. "Don't you know the rules of the sea?" "This ain't no blinking ship, guv'nor," said a quiet voice; "this 'ere's a lighthouse."—Answers.

Gets Most Blame

Little Sarah and her little brother quarreled one day. An older sister trying to find which child was at fault finally said: "Oh, I think it was just six of one and half-dozen of the other." Little Sarah began to cry. "I know you mean I'm the half-dozen," she sobbed. "I always get the most blame."—Indianapolis News.
